Millennium

Kelsey Cramer (not pictured) submitted the New York picture on pages 2 and 3. She welcomed Y2K with a friend at Time Square in New York City. Four hours before midnight, polisaid the Times Square area was filled to capacity. There was official count but observers said it easily exceeded one millio

Y2K

Crates filled with bottled water, batteries and canned goods were common items bought in preparation for the dreaded Y2K. The sad thing is none of this was needed. Millions of people all over the world rang in the new year without a single glitch or flicker of lighting.

Despite warnings of terrorism, people all around the world cheerfully greeted the new year.

The lights stayed on in India, planes landed safely in China and telephones still rang across the Middle East.

Millennium...

At midnight, a flashing, glittering crystal ball dropped to a countdown from a cheering, banner waving crowd that flooded mid-town, went off in Times Square, New York City. The ball was even specially designed for the new millennium with 90 rotating pyramid mirrors that sent lights dancing across the crowd below.

Cash machines kept working in New Zealand, one of the first nations where computers were put to the test by the date change from 1999 to 2000.

It is the things that little girls' dreams are made of. Being the queen, winning the crown, the robe, and the glory. For one lucky girl, the dream came true on a muddy football field on a rainy Friday night in late September. Marci Stack was crowned Freeport's homecoming queen on September 24, 1999, by 1998's queen, Brooke Olson. Marci was escorted by Matt Arvay, and is the daughter of Paul and Lynne Stack.

Congratulations to the entire court!

This year's dinner theatre, "Hide and Shriek," treated a sold out audience to laughs, good food and great acting. The guests to the Dimshroud Mansion were treated to an authentic hillbilly meal, complete with Granny's famous peach cobler.

Fashion Show

City at Night

This years Childrens Hospital Fundraising Fashion Show was quite a success. Chaired by Marci Stack and assisted by Margaret Bellotti, this years theme was "City at Night." Over one thousand dollars were raised for Children's Hospital, making this years fundraiser the most successful to date.

School Spirit

Spirit is defined as strong loyalty or dedication, but here at Freeport it means something deeper. Our SUPER FANS don't just go to the games and cheer but actually dress in silly clothes to show their Freeport Pride. Every home football game you could find a couple of crazy fans covered in war paint, ready to rally the football team to victory. Seniors find their houses drenched in Freport Pride every year for senior night, as parents and teammates add their Jacket Fever.

This year's fearless leaders, Sara and Ryan.

Chairpersons Sara Waltenbaugh and Ryan Fleischer set a goal of 95 pints of blood to be collected at this year's American Red Cross Blood Drive. Their expectations were not only met, but exceeded, with a record 105 pints of blood donated. Donors were rewarded with pizza, cookies and punch to "raise their spirits." Sara and Ryan would like to thank all of the donors.

Graduation

May 26, 2000 was a day that this year's seniors had been impatiently awaiting for thirteen long years of school. The air was filled with excitement as the 146 graduating seniors gathered in Laube Hall. Donning their blue and gold gowns they walked together in their final exercise as high school students. Kristen Ross spoke of the years growing up, the tears and triumphs that were shared through thirteen years, and Andrew Pifer spoke of what the future has to hold.

To the graduating class of 2000: Congratulations and good luck in all of your endeavors. May you receive all that life has to offer.

Musical

The Pajama Game

This year's presentation of the Pajama Game followed in the footsteps of past musical greatness. A hilariously charming cast of characters dazzled the audience with their acting, singing and dancing. A big thanks to Mr. Ortego and the pit band for their hard work. A special thanks to Mr. Richard Pavlik, for without his vision, Freeport musicals would not be such a success.

The Unified Arts Department spends a lot of time doing things for others. For example, the art classes went down to Athletic Images and painted their windows for Christmas. The Band and Chorus perform for the community twice a year. The Child Development Classes take care of children as a day care. All the little things that we do helps our community. It makes the citizens feel happy when they see students giving a helping hand to anyone that is in need.

Judy Harbison Secretary Senior High

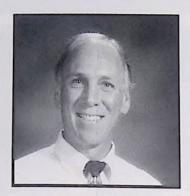

Sue Hunter Secretary Senior High

The secretaries at our schools work hard each day typing letters, filling in absentee sheets, helping students, and numerous other duties. The secretaries do get help from students who are office assistants. These students keep busy helping with the absentee sheets, delivering messages to students and teachers, sorting mail, delivering supplies, and other routine assignments. These students take time away from their study halls or homeroom in order to help the school. The guidance counselors discuss future plans with the students encouraging them to take the classes necessary for their chosen careers, along with discussing colleges, technical schools, places of possible employment, and the skills and education required.

Great Balls of Fire

Matt Arvay enjoys all of the funny memories about his past golf season. One funny moment Matt would like to remember is when Drew accidentally knocked down a wooden fence at Pizza Hut after their victory at St. Joes. However, what he would like to remember most is throwing Coach Panach in the lake after taking first in the section. Last but not least, Matt Avray would like to add, "In all actuality, in all seriousness, all kidding aside, Kelsey Harned is the greatest."

When asked about one of the funniest moments this past basketball season, Brandon Farster said, "When I first discovered why Brian Dela Rosa is called Straight P!"

When asked about their funniest moment Drew and Ryan both said, "When they were changing before the Pine Richland game and Coach Sikora walked in and Drew was wearing his 'special boxers'." Drew said that he enjoys "the competitiveness as well as the sweat and tears of the game." Ryan would like to thank all the seniors for the great memories and would like to wish them luck in the future with all that they do. "I would also like to give a shout out to my boy Drew Pifer, my dance partner. Good luck with your golf career." We're so proud of you! Good luck at college and in everything you do.

Love Mom, Dad, B.f. and Jason

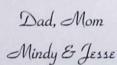

What a delight it has been watching you grow from a child into a beautiful, caring, young woman. Remember now as you go into the world to let God be your guide. He is always with you and will never let you down.

Wε love you,

Jessica,

May you forever enjoy the simple things in life.

Megan,

Some special thoughts and memories are meant for you alone---

Thoughts that bring a quiet smile for special times we've known,

Thoughts that bring a sigh or two for days when you were small,

Thoughts about your growing years--- so happy to recall....

But best of all are thoughts of you the way you are today---

So many things about you bring more pride than words can say---

And now your graduation seems to bring to light so beautifully

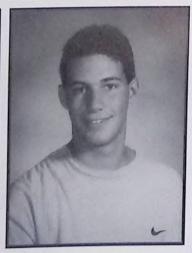

The joy of all you ever were and all you've grown to be.

Love, Mom

My First Born Son,

The students graduating in 2000 were considered "something special" because they were graduating in the new millennium. Many of us parents of the graduating seniors never even thought of what year they would be graduating when they started kindergarten. We were just concerned with how we were going to get through the day without them by our side. For many of us it wasn't until we read in the newspaper that the year 2000 graduating class was entering kindergarten that our children would be graduating in the year 2000. Wow, the year 2000--how long away that seemed, and how fast it came! The media led you to believe these students were really special as they followed them through the grades. As parents and teachers we know that all students are special!

At the beginning of this school year we were inunduated with the need to be concerned about January 1, 2000. Computers were going to fail, water and food shortage could occur, etc. Many people planned for this and some companies made a nice profit as people stored emergency supplies. For some of us who rely on computers every day, and deal with their good and bad points constantly, we were confident they would not fail us; and if by some chance they would we felt we we could rely on software companies to provide the millennium answers. Well, the end of the world hasn't come and most of us have survived the first year of the new millennium and are looking forward to what the 21st Century will hold. I would like to wish all the students, parents, teachers, and administration good health and happiness in the next century.

A special thanks to all the students who worked on this yearbook—an all-encomapssing job! Of course, a special thanks goes to Bethany Almquist, Jason Hawk, Lisa Romanowski, Kerri Sample and Erin Shirey who worked on the book during the summer, to Bonnie Almquist, Judy Lutz, and Pam Ferko for selling books at the Junior High, and for Kathy Seagriff for helping with Junior High identification and proofing.

A Look Upon the Years

Excitingly holding their parents' hands,
Here the graduation class of 2000 stands,
All of them under four feet tall,
This kindergarten class seems so small.
They began their learning with ABC's and 123's,
Their May I's and Thank You's and pretty, pretty, please.
Thirteen more years on the road to come,
Will be the last of the Millennium.

Now onto grade one, an entire day's stay,
With Sesame Street, Legos, and Spiderman we play,
When we first got to ride the big, yellow bus home,
And first started to read on our own.
Remember Berinstein Bears and Dr. Suess,
The Little Engine that Could and Morris the Moose?
It was hard to leave Mom but as the year came around,
It got easier with all the new friends we'd found.

After summer came fall,
Which meant second grade for us all,
We walked into school this year,
With fluorescent colors, side ponytails, and L.A. Gear.
Our teachers parently waited with a smile,
As we got, one by one, into single file.
They taught us row to add and subtract,
And how to write in cursive as a matter of fact.

Next onto grade hree, memories aplenty,
Some of the Gule War, now only a memory,
For this was the ear that we made our parents' proud,
As they watched our Third Grade Play in the crowd.
When Full House was the TV show to mock,
And everyone loved New Kids on the Block.
Remember when slap bracelets were the fad
And when a discontinued Fraggle Rock made you sad?

The rumors of grade four as the hardest year we did hear, All those timed table tests, oh, yes we did fear. Remembering now, those apprehensions were mostly false, As we walked down the streets bouncing to M.C. Hammer's pulse.

What a good year, with the exception of fashion, Neon clothes with shirt ties and scrunch socks were our passion.

We spent our time watching Saved By the Bell, And at recess "Red Rover, Red Rover" we did yell.

Now at grade five, time was moving so fast, But hardly anyone noticed as we had a blast, Painting our shirts and pegging our jeans, Growing up is all about going through preteens. When backwards Friday was the best day of all, To wear jeans, underwear, shorts, or even backward one strap overalls!

Did you remember this was the grade you were in, When the Stanley Cup the Pengiuns did win? Remember grade six, how we were so cool,
And how we acted like we ruled the school?
Walking around with our heads held high,
As other kids looked up to us as we went by.
We acted as if nothing could bring us down,
But for next year, we knew to start back on the ground.
The last year of elementary school should have been the best,
And as we went on, we knew our friendships would be put to the test.

Seventh grade was almost entirely unfamiliar,
With a new building, teachers, and students, a few peculiar.
A few of us were not ready for this transition,
To memorize, at which bell went a new class position.
But the ones who were ready did find,
Countless opportunities for the willing mind.
Despite much disbelief we all got through,
And even sometimes made a friend or two.

The next year, eighth grade, was spent in preparation,
For the four years of high school, before graduation.
However, this was not all that we focused upon,
There were many projects to be completed before we moved on.
Of course there was English, Gym, and other basic classes,
But do you remember the solar powered car races?
If so, then eighth grade you probably hold dear,
And can remember far more than we even came near.

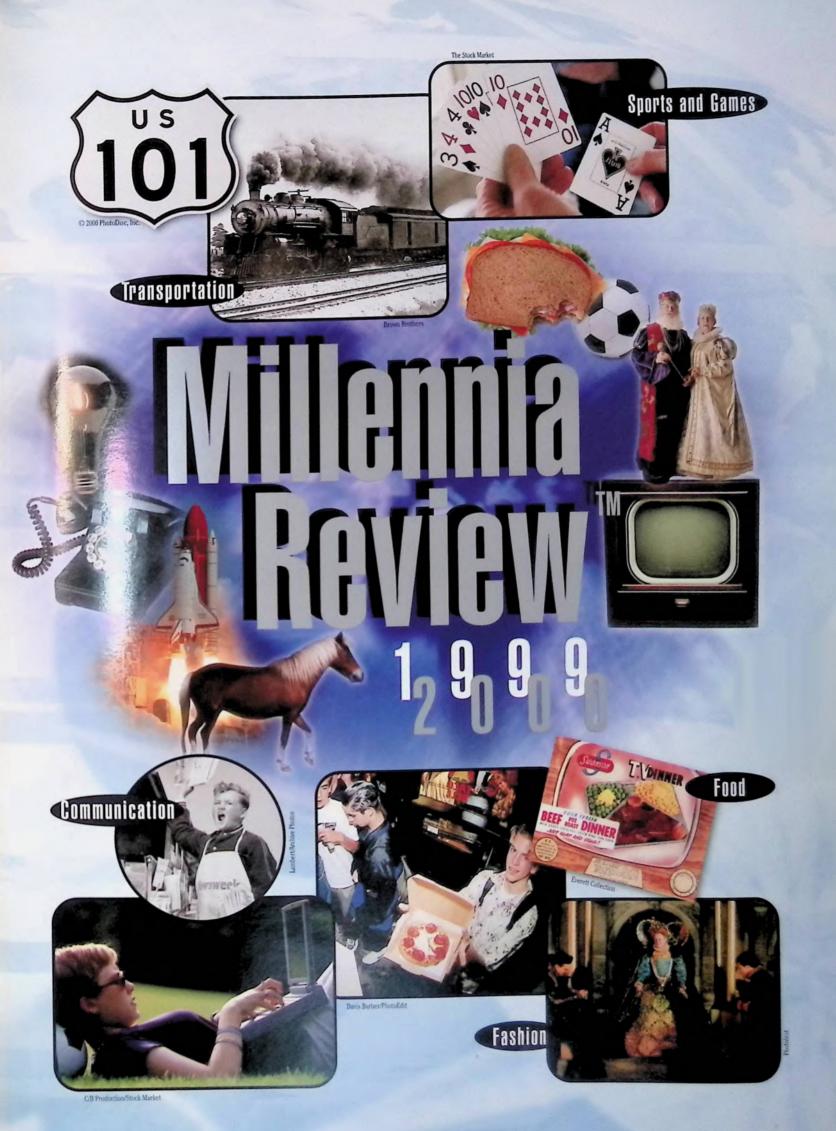

Next we moved up to grade nine, apprehensively,
And wondered how we were to get where we were supposed to be,
For the high school was a little bigger than we were accustomed to,
And a three or four minute bell change seemed to go so quickly through.
All the sports and activities blew our minds away,

All the sports and activities blew our minds away,
Whereas many of us know a lot about Russia today,
The best part of grade nine would get our vote,
As dissecting a frog or Miss Bird's Romeo & Juliet devote.

Tenth and Eleventh grades are there to put in time,
So when graduation nears, credits wise you are fine.
These years were full of hardships indeed,
For no longer did we require a hand's lead.
A little taste of freedom with a license in our name,
Led to pulling the trigger as a trademark fame.
As these years pulled to a finish,
They were worth it for the SAT stress to diminish.

Here we are in the last high school grade known,
Already halfway independent and on our own,
With our future plans already made,
I ask you to not let the memories fade,
For you grew up with these people and will always remember,
The invaluable time and countless memories together.
So we say to you, our fellow 2000 Alumni,
We wish you Peace, Happiness, and Success in the Years to Live By.
