A Regal Day

When can you see old high school friends, classic cars, a football game and a half-time show featuring a queen and her court? . . . Burrell's Homecoming, of course.

It was once again a beautiful day for Burrell's traditional homecoming game and half-time festivities. Seniors from earlier years, proud parents, and students gathered to see the new Homecoming Queen, Krissy Settlemyer, and her court.

Krissy Settlemyer and her escort Ray Sharick reigned over a court consisting of four couples, each representing their respective class. Leslie Wick, the senior attendant, chose Brian McNally to accompany her in the extravaganza. The junior class selected Charmayne Renock who was escorted by Todd Spires. Representing the sophomore class were Jamie Guiliani and Rich Fennell, and David Beal and Teresa Arnone were the freshman attendants.

The Learning Process

Top Left: Come on, Mario Sansosti, is that what Moby Dick is really about?

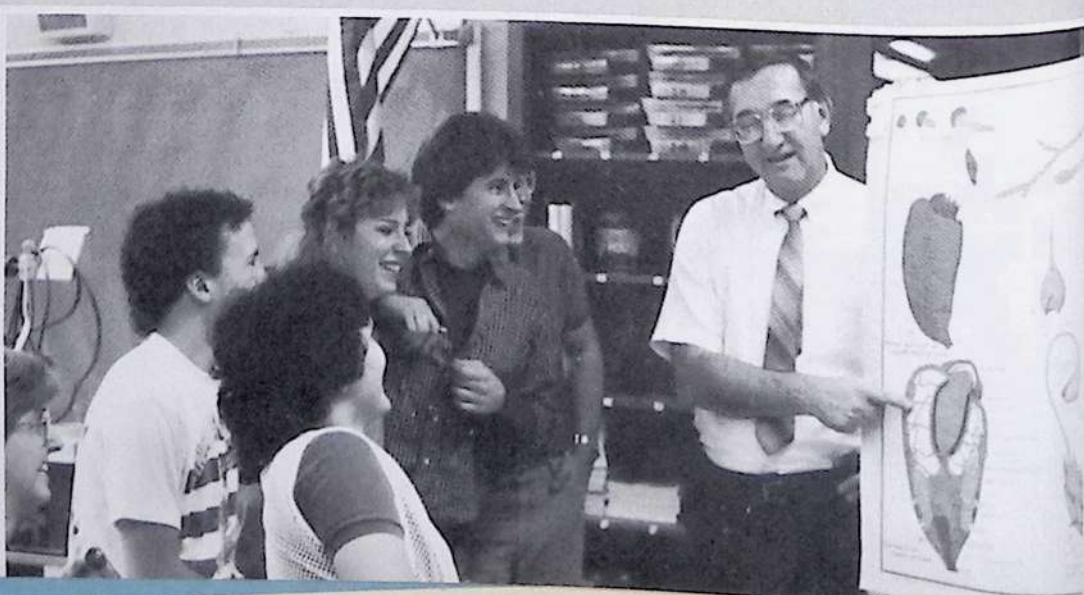

Top Right: Okay, Brian McNally and Mark Pajerski, put that Playboy away!

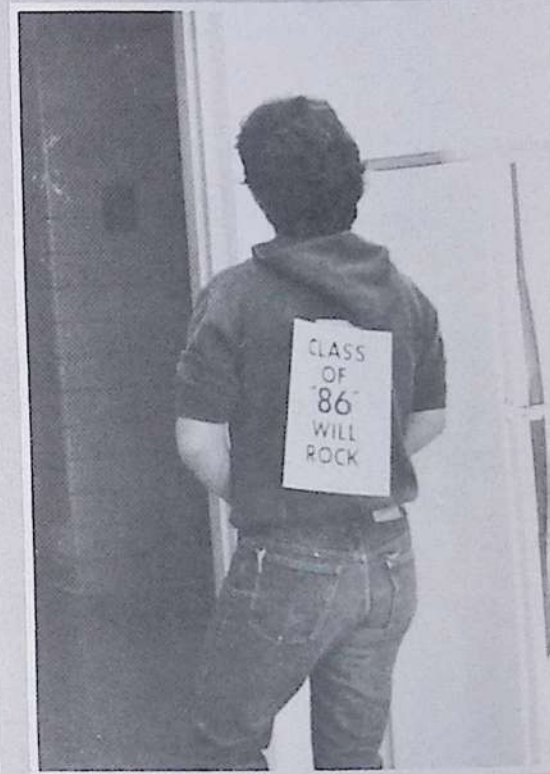

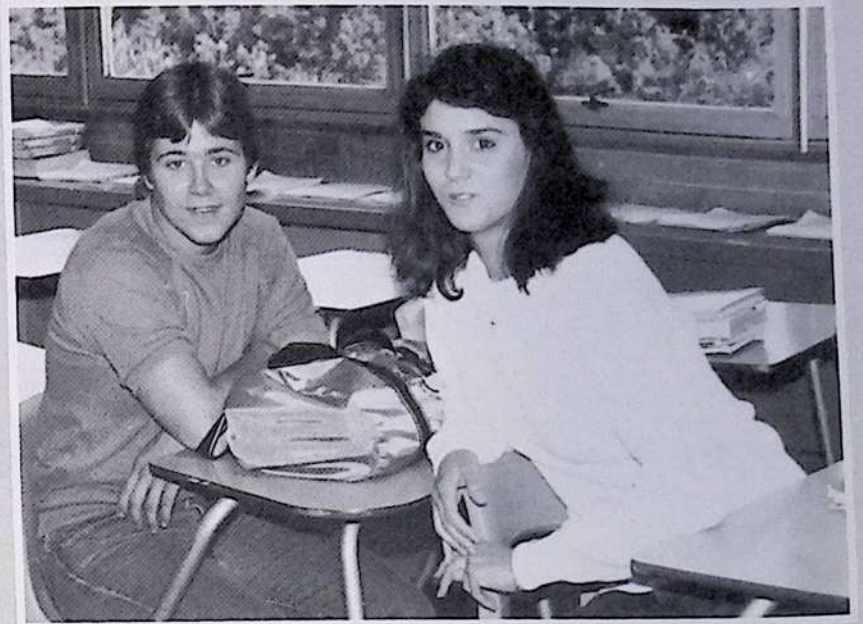

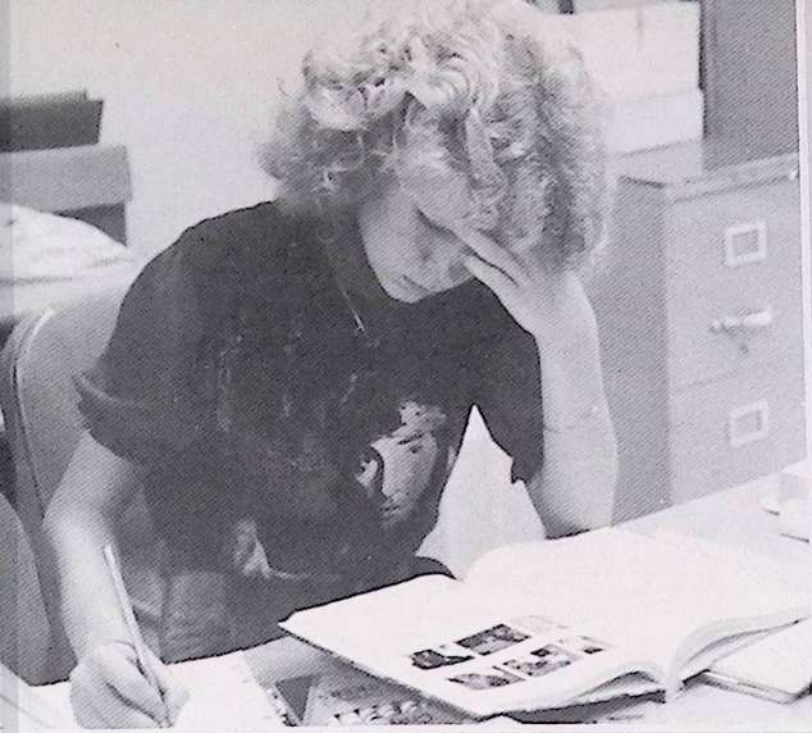

Middle Right: Ahhh . . . so that's how you do it, Mr. Earhart.

Top Right: Derek Reifschneider and Jennifer Perriello, you have got to stop meeting like this.

Hairy Legs Do Not a Good Kickline Make

The festivities of Senior Weekend kicked off on Friday with the annual senior dress-up day and pep rally, with the seniors being greeted with candy-filled and ribbon-strewn lockers. Arriving in sportcoats and dresses, they were eager for their pictures to appear splashed across yearbook pages. The highlight of the day occurred at the pep rally, with the student body entertained with the antics of seniors dressed as majorettes, colorguards, and cheerleaders attempting to perform halftime routines (hairy legs do not a good kickline make). The weekend drew to a close on Saturday with the last home game against Freeport. Seniors, escorted by their parents, were honored for their years of service to the school.

Taking It Easy

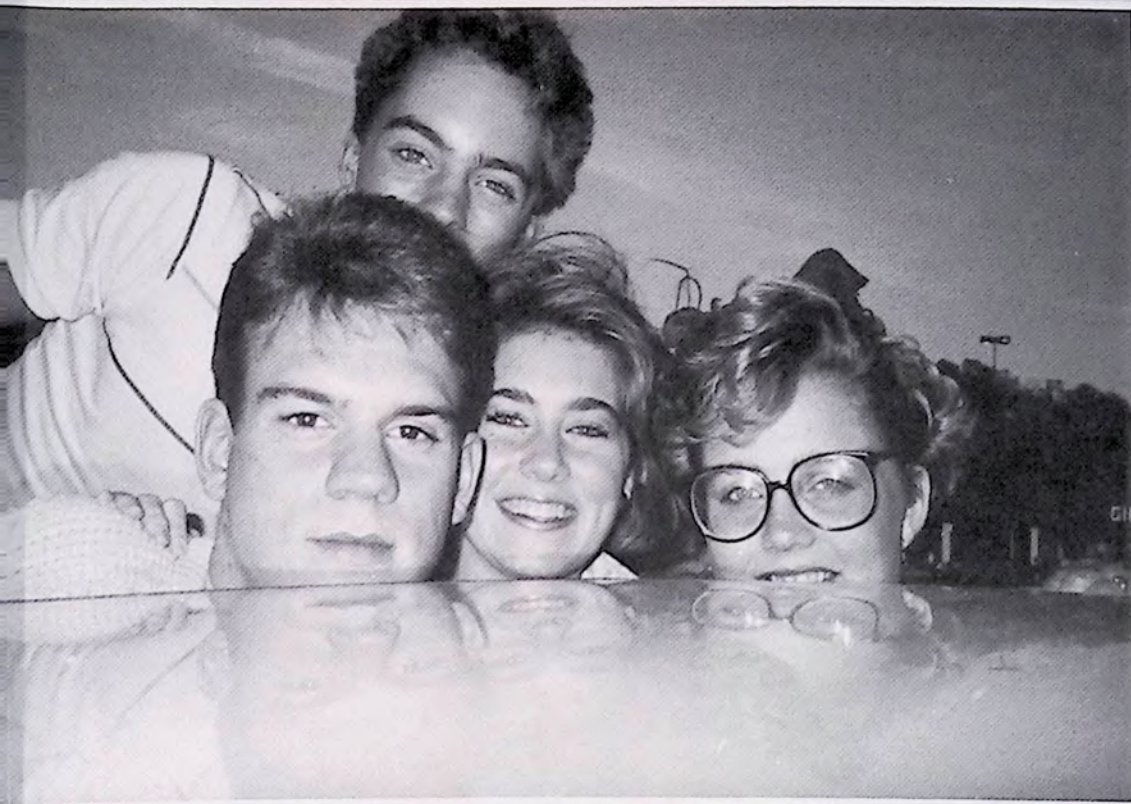

Julie Gulick socks it to the competition.

Is it me, or are the halls really spinning?

Top: Our boys really stack up.

Top: Reflections

Halloween Hits Burrell

Strains of "Tequila" were heard filtering through the halls, and everywhere the eye turned it was accosted by a menagerie of creatures. All forms were represented that fateful October 31st as the senior class dared to be different. The costumes were the combination of ingenuity and planning or of something decided upon the night before. From the flappers to the fishermen, and the holy to the hardrockers, the seniors inspired a day of fun, frolic, and fantasy.

Top right: Nurse Hyland administers first aid to Mary McIntyre with the help of Dr. Jeffries.

He flashes a grin that reveals a not-so-perfect set of pearly whites, stuffs his hands deeper into the pockets of the dress-for-success pants that contrast with the double-breasted jacket, and squints. His first joke has just bombed—it's a typical night, and this episode of "Late Night with David Letterman" promises spectacular viewing. Viewer Mail, Stupid Pet Tricks, Dropping Stuff from a Ten-Story Tower—all hallmarks of Letterman, the nightowl hero of procrastinators who would rather watch his show than study. Beginning at 12:30 AM and lasting for an hour, Letterman's program intersplices dialogue from guests he roasts from behind his desk, while gulping mugfuls of Perrier and non-sensical skits. A tour of director Al Frish's refrigerator could be the norm one evening, or audiences who recount "Brushes With . . ." stupidity, greatness, or the law, being rewarded with an NBC sponge or collapsible cup. Assisted by "the band" director Paul Schaffer, a balding keyboardist who favors neon ties or Larry "Bud" Melman, a vegetable-like man with bifocals and razor haircut, who pushes "Toast Without a Stick," Dave is usually

Dress For Success!

Styles in 1985 reflected a growing interest in the past, making what's old, what's new. The Baroque look, gaining popularity due to influences by movies like "Amadeus," re-emerged with lace, fanciful tapestry prints, and multiple strands of pearls and gems. Fashion grew nostalgic for the sixties, as peace symbol jewelry surfaced, bringing with it a modified paisley and electric neon colors. Stirrup pants, thin-fabric bottoms which molded to the wearer and tapered to the ankle, where elastic stretched them under the foot, and last seen in the vicinity of the fifties, were paired with oversize print sweaters, often belonging to the guys. "Miami Vice" star Don Johnson, in three days' stubble and a smirk, proved that a guy could wear pastels and still look cool. Dressed in Italian-cut suit jackets and sockless loafers, worn with inexpensive cotton T-shirts, any man could imitate his Sonny Crockett persona.

A still life features some of the fashion accessories: watches, pearls, and patterned sweaters.

Bag it: Bringing Lunch

Your stomach growls. You try to ignore it. Your teacher keeps on talking and your stomach growls again. You look at your watch: Five more minutes until lunch. Will my stomach make it? The bell rings, and everyone dashes for the door. The stampede of growling stomachs swarms to the cafeteria. You are now faced with two choices: Stand in line for ten minutes or do your homework. For the people that choose to eat, they are faced with the task of wolfing down lunch and socializing at the same time. And for the procrastinators who brave the rest of the day without food, they try to ignore the people eating around them and rush through an assignment they know they will never finish. The only alternative to this dilemma is to possibly do all your homework the night before, or get up an extra 1 1/2 hour early and skip breakfast. Growl.

Pee-Wee Herman cycles to victory in a dream sequence from "Pee-Wee Herman's Big Adventure," the film that skyrocketed him to fame.

It Pays to Play the Nerd

Stuffed into a tight grey suit with a miniature red bowtie, his face smeared with rouge and his feet clogged in platform shoes, Pee-Wee Herman, with his gawky laugh and hit movie, was the comic for '85. His character, created and portrayed by Paul Reubens, was a frequent staple of such shows as "Late Night with David Letterman" and "Meatballs II," or in the company of crony Cyndi Lauper, with his fame skyrocketing with his summertime release. His quirky brand of humor, which blends child-like gadgets and toys with snippets of zany dialogue, was highlighted in "Pee Wee's Big Adventure," a movie, that told the story of a boy and his bike. Glimpses of Herman's storybook world were revealed: a gingerbread house filled with Children's Palace merchandise, inhabited by trying-but-can't-get-him Dotie, the freckle-faced bike shop manager, and the cartoonlike Gerheld, the sinister do-badder who steals Herman's prized possession—his European deluxe one seater bicycle. On a cross-country trek to retrieve his property, Herman falls into the company of a motorcycle gang, whom he dazzles with his table-top rendition of "Tequila," befriends a waitress with a psychotic boyfriend, hitchhikes with a mass murderer, is duped by a palm reader, discovers the Alamo has no basement, contracts amnesia, and manages to be awarded a movie contract to retell his tale. And the rest, of course, is history.

Lights, Cameras, Action!

These three words start the cameras rolling and begin the making of a movie. There were some blockbusters that catered specifically to the youth market, and most were summertime releases. Michael J. Fox, usually seen in the television series "Family Ties," starred in "Back To The Future," a Steven Spielberg science fiction feature about a boy that travels to the past by way of a modified DeLorean and meets his parents as teenagers. Mom and Pops were a bit different then, he being the nerd and she the school heart-throb, with Michael having to arrange their meeting to keep himself alive in the present day. Although appearing in theaters in January, Eddie Murphy's "Beverly Hills Cop" achieved the same commercial success, owing almost entirely to the wisecracking humor of its star, and aided by an equally well received soundtrack. Sylvester Stallone's "Rambo: First Blood Part II," was a departure from the comedy genre, with John Rambo as a Vietnam veteran who returns to retrieve prisoners of war,

Salespeople Unite!

Excuse me, sir, I'm a student at Burrell Senior High, and I'm selling twelve different things this week. Would you like anything? I have beautiful indoor/outdoor thermometers and edible Christmas ornaments. Not interested? Well then, how about some delicious Jumbo Cookie Pies or handy Buc Spirit Pencils? Still not interested? I don't mean to be forward, sir, but you look like the party type of guy. Why don't you buy a Coupon Power Book and take that special person out on the town? I know you'll want some munchies for the evening. I have a variety of semi-edible candies. Licorice, lollipops, M&M's, Spree's, almond or crunchy candy bars . . . Excuse me, sir, but my foot is in the door.

Bryn Marelli, Michela Virdano, and Jake Derlink contemplate their next sale.

Achim Heimer putting around again

Fall sports are often dominated by football; however, this year's boys golf team's record surpassed the winning season of the football team. The golf team, led by newcomer exchange student Achim Heimer, juniors Todd Spires and Shawn Donley, and sophomores Kevin Crum and Steve Surma, had an impressive season, finishing with a section record of 8-2. Their winning record provided them with the opportunity to compete in the W.P.I.A.L. play-offs. Unfortunately, their chance was snuffed out with a defeat from Butler.

Although the team was not able to advance farther, one member did get that chance. Senior Achim Heimer swept through individual section play, until losing the opportunity to continue to the state finals by one stroke.

Coach Phil Malobicky had these words to say, "I am proud of this year's team; they're a good bunch." It was a fine season for the boys as they have started a winning tradition.

Expectations were running high that second week of August as the girls of the Burrell tennis team began practicing. Under the direction of coach Paul Shiring, the girls had an eventful season. Team captain Jamie Mattioli and her sister Cassie, along with Kristen Collodi and team MVP Susan Renda, represented the team in the WPIAL Doubles play-offs.

Unfortunately, to the team's disappointment, they did not qualify for the WPIAL Team play-offs with their record of 2-8. But the record does not represent the entire picture as each match had its own story of hard fought victories or disheartening defeats.

It began six months before the first game; the preparation of toughening the mind and body through weightlifting. Then in the summer came dustbowl; the hard practices beneath the blazing sun. When the boys in blue took the field in that first game against Valley to their final departure from the Kittanning field, they showed their winning spirit, true-grit determination, and well-honed skill.

The team, under the leadership of head coach Albert Mauro, and assistant coaches Gene Collodi, Tom Henderson, Bill McGregor, Chet Napierkowski, Rich Napierkowski, and Tony Trozzi, ended the season with a 5-5 section record. Key players who contributed to the Burrell wins were senior Brian McCarrell at quarterback and juniors Rob Hrivnak and Tom Hornack. Although the team record did not qualify them for the play-offs, they always provided the fans with some shining moments of football.

"J-A-M, J-A-M, you've got to jam!" Burrell cheerleaders have been "jamming" the student body for a year. Beginning with summer morning practice sessions in the senior court, the girls lived through sweat, pulled muscles, and bad knees to learn cheers for the football and basketball seasons. During the summer, the girls went to Eastern Cheerleaders Camp. Against stiff competition, the girls won thirteen superior ribbons, and three trophies, including best all-around squad. They also participated in the Heights Plaza competition, where they took home first prize for their routine to Madonna's "I'm Burning Up." In the spring, the girls travel to Virginia for more competition. Burrell Varsity Cheerleaders have brought back a sense of pride to our school through their accomplishments. May their spirit continue to inspire us.

Whether they ran, strutted, or limped, the Boys' Varsity Basketball team appeared to be on top. Injuries such as Brian McNally's chipped bone and Don Ryans' sprained ankle forced Coach Derlink to play his sixth and seventh men. The team enjoyed a phenomenal season, which is due to their long hours of practice. With the loss of their two key players, the bulk of leadership shifted to Senior Ray Sharick with help from juniors James Thomas and Jeff Mazur. Juniors Jake Derlink, Steve Szul, and Pat Covert did well coming off the bench. The team headed into the WPIAL playoffs and should be commended on a job well done.

Long hours of lay-ups, foul shots, and passing drills, failed to produce a winning season for the Lady Bucs. Under direction of Coach Pat Flaherty, the girls attempted to break a two-year losing streak. Unfortunately, their spirit and enthusiasm were not enough to propel them into the winner's circle. However, they counteracted their defeats with confident smiles and heads held high. Team captains, Shan Leslie and Christy Harris, each had a superb season with individual scoring highs. The team is looking for more experience and depth for the next season.

A group of eleven men, donning bikini bathing suits, pulled together this year to form an impressive team. This group was able to obtain outstanding results in their meets while still having fun at practices. School swimming teacher, Ken Virostek, doubled as swim coach for a second straight year. Co-captains Jay Piernik and Greg Ludwiczak held a major role in leading the team. Greg, along with sophomore Tony Sharkins, qualified for the WPIAL meet held at the University of Pittsburgh.

The team's greatest victory was an upset over Kiski. Hard work, team depth and school spirit paid off throughout the season. Practices were always lively with coach Williams bellowing instructions and the complaints of many a swimmer. Team Captain Suzette Song was quoted as saying, "I think it helped when they changed the water in the pool. It's all related to chemistry when the water reacts with the oils on the skin . . ." Despite this comment, she represented the team at WPIAL's and set her mark in the 50 freestyle. The team is already preparing for a winning season next year.

Burrell's tradition of wrestling excellence was upheld in the past season, as junior Mark Scripps and Senior Shawn DesLauriers were ranked among the top five in a Pittsburgh Post-Gazette poll. Wrestlers continued their struggles to stay within their weight categories, working out with Nautilus machines, starving, and exercising with multiple layers of clothing. Most matches received strong support, with the exception of a home meet against Valley, which was deliberately closed to everyone but the wrestlers to avoid rival fighting that had erupted in past seasons. Captain Shawn DesLauriers was able to bolster team spirit aiding Coach Tursky in keeping a heightened attitude that often translated into wins.

From West Germany With Love!!

Achim Heimer, our AFS student from Bielefeld, Germany, has been quite a celebrity around Burrell High School this year. His easygoing personality and sense of humor have gained him many friends.

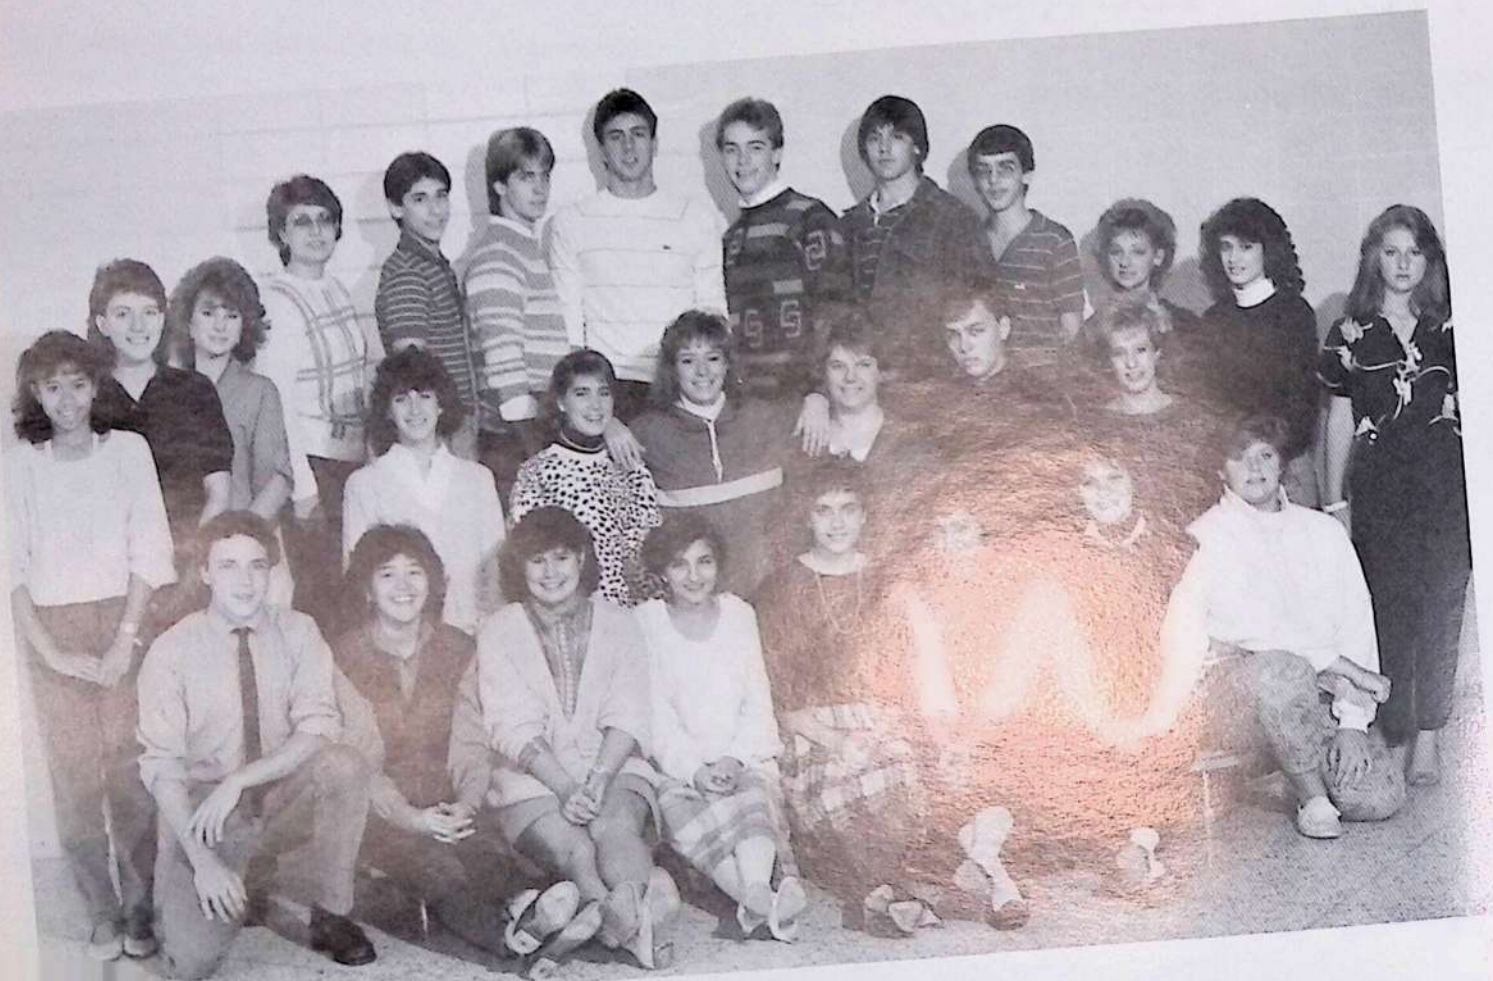

Achim is staying with the Zuck family. He is having a great time here, and says the thing he enjoys most about America is the friendliness of the people. Achim has kept himself very busy this year with a wide variety of classes and activities. He is taking calculus, honors English, logic and sociology while at the same time participating in swimming, golf, and tennis.

Achim says although he misses his parents and sister very much he wouldn't trade his year at Burrell for anything.

Achim displays his school spirit at a home football game against Springdale, surrounded by majorettes Natalie Marine, Leslie Rovnanik, Sarah Yost, and Amy Frederick.

Although the Buccopia Staff Consisted of 22 members, we would especially like to thank the following people who were always there when needed:

Keith Beer, well-known for his ad selling expertise, spent many hours proofing layouts.

Michele Paolillo, as activities editor or affectionately known as Toby, worked to the wee hours of the morning to meet her deadline.

Kristen Collodi, as underclassmen editor, livened up the underclassmen section with articles on the fads of '85.

Kathy Renda, as faculty editor, brought a new dimension to the faculty section with teacher dossiers.

Renee Solomon, as editor of the copywriting department, made numerous trips to Kiski during school hours to process film as a personal favor to editor Julie Gulick.

Susan Renda, as sports editor, spiced up the sports section with her clever captions and a nostalgic bent.

Julie Gulick, as editor-in-chief, provided an excellent example of dedication and hard work to the entire staff.

The photographers, for their unique style of picture taking and helpful attitudes in meeting deadlines.

Mrs. Conroy deserves accolades for allowing us free access to her room and for her superb organizational skills.

And finally Mrs. Jones for providing a stable support system upon which we constantly relied.

Junior Michele Paolillo, activities editor, and Renee Solomon, head of copywriting, confer over pages for the latest deadline.

Burrell's participants in the program included, in front, Natalie Marine, Sarah Yost, and Christine Modey; in back, Michele Polak, and Tracy Capellman.

Sarah Yost performs her talent presentation, a ballet routine to accompany "Somewhere Over the Rainbow" that she choreographed herself. It earned her the award in the performing art category.

Sarah Yost became the Alle-Kiski Junior Miss and traveled to Reading, Pa. for the state pageant, where she won the talent prize.

Natalie Marine, winner of the Spirit of Junior Miss and the Academic Award, energizes her dance portion with hand clapping.

Tracy Capellman, Poise and Appearance winner, impresses the judges with her enthusiastic stepping.

Tossing the Bouquet

Burrell caught the bouquet this year, The Bride's Bouquet, that is, as the play by Kurtz Gordon was performed on the 22nd and 23rd days of November. The drama centered around the will of Silas Battman. The will stipulated that Paul Battman had to be married by his 23rd birthday or his long-lost cousin would inherit the family fortune. The antagonist turned out to be Paul's friend, Roger Varley. Fortunately, Roger's tricks back-fired and the happy couple were united in marriage.

Music Makers at Mid-Time

The marching band headed to the hottest south for the coolest jazz to bring Bourbon Street to halftime, in the high-stepping, laid-back "St. Louis Women". The 80-member squad strutted and wailed in antics that cut the field, then showed their diversity in the placid Oriental tones and harmony of "Anything Goes". The brass section trumpeted the fast-paced "Wake Me Up", and the drums sounded to the pulsating Spanish accompaniment "Mirada".

The group spent the last week of August at band camp, perfecting drills and learning numbers, culminating at a parade in Kennywood.

Student director Don Ross and Karen Orkis, working closely with Mr. Lagoon and Mr. Farinelli, perfected their conducting skills for the games. The band, known for imparting spirit at away games, continued the tradition with confetti, kazoos and an exuberant drum section.

Steppin' Out

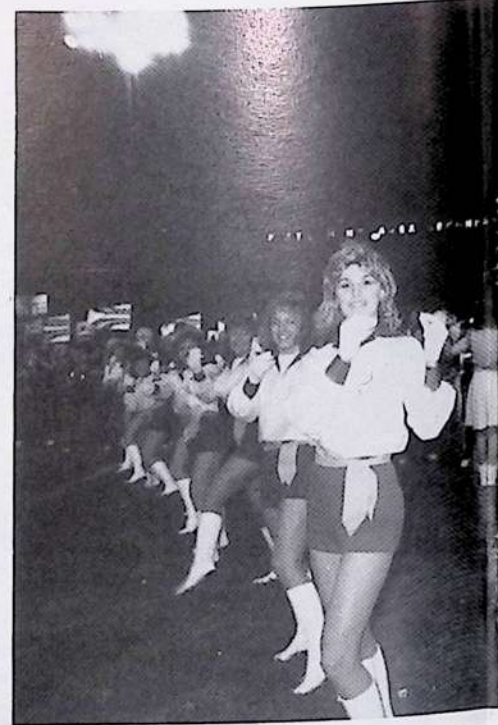

The majorettes with flouting, flirtatious skirts and ground-sweeping capes, strutted through a smoky jazz-filled opener of St. Louis Women. Then, they became Betty Boop flappers for the 1920's Five Foot Two. Their half-time performances were the results of early-morning practices.

Under the direction of Head Sarah Yost and Co-Head Sandy Mittereder, the girls took tedious, summer hours to perfect their routines. However, not everything was hard work as the new members experienced the trials and tribulations of initiation, and then the unity of Spirit Week.

Array of Silks

A new look was double-timed onto the field as the colorguard swung into action; white, blue and gold uniforms formed visual contrast with their new two-toned silks.

Their outfits provided sharp images in "Mirada," a pulsating Spanish rhythm with slapping flags, conjuring pictures of flamingo dancers and castanets. The squad revealed their skills in the less performed jazz rendition of "Live." The seedy underbelly of 1930's Shanghai displayed in the oriental-tinged "Anything Goes."

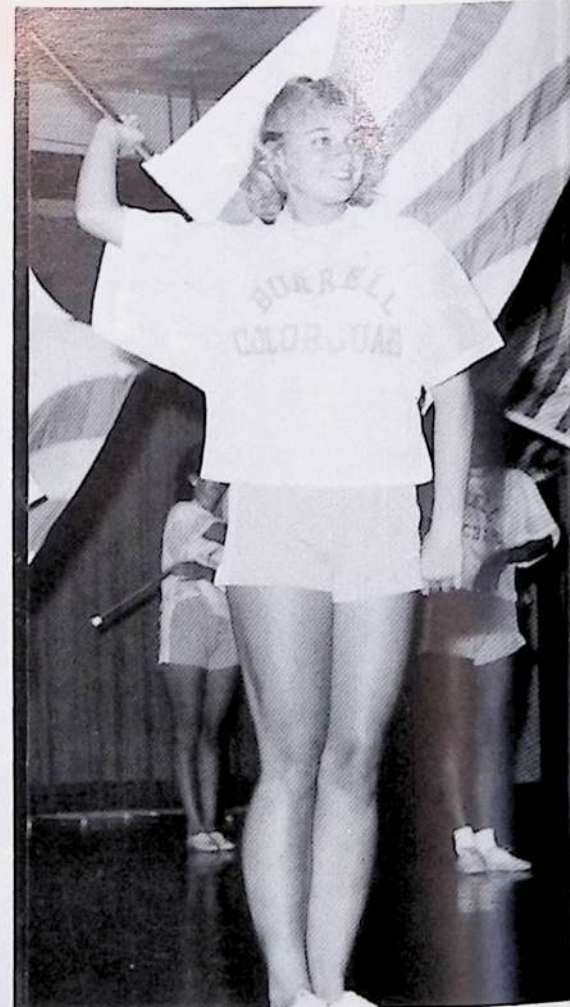

Summer practices were handled by the guiding hands of Head Missy Kijowski and Co-head Lauren Aversa. Richard Farinelli was a shadow in the background, but still an ever present figure offering suggestions and support.

THIS WAS THE YEAR THAT:

Burrell captured Valley's Viking.

The Burrell vs. Valley wrestling match was closed to the public.

The Chicks of 1986 and The Brew Crew ruled the school.

Mr. Prazenica returned to our humble school sporting a Ph.D.

Mr. Malobicky left for a promising future at Charles A. Huston Middle School.

We had our first in-the-auditorium pep rally.

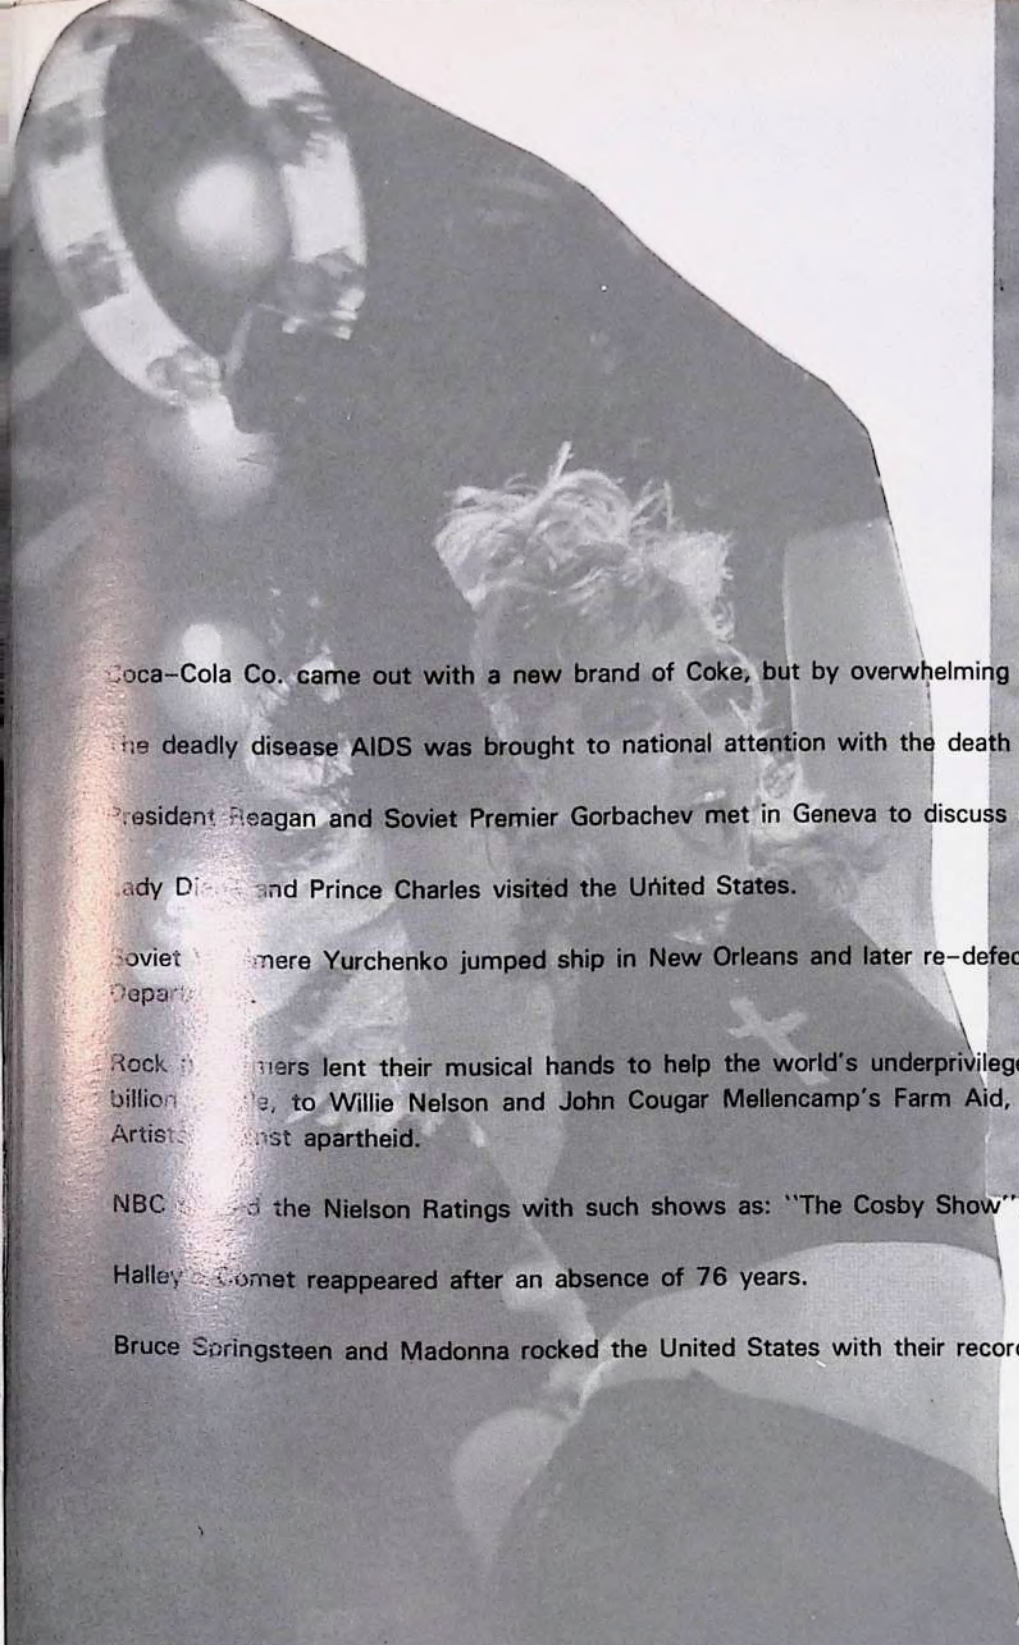

The senior class broke all records in a highly successful magazine sale.

The varsity cheerleaders won the Heights Plaza Cheerleading Competition.

TV-3 paid a visit to Burrell which was televised during half-time of the live broadcast of the Burrell-Deer Lakes basketball game.

Burrell missed a day of school because of vandalism of the school buses.

Burrell basketball and football seniors were plagued by season-ending injuries.

Coca-Cola Co. came out with a new brand of Coke, but by overwhelming public demand Classic Coke returned.

The deadly disease AIDS was brought to national attention with the death of actor Rock Hudson.

President Reagan and Soviet Premier Gorbachev met in Geneva to discuss diplomatic relations.

Lady Di and Prince Charles visited the United States.

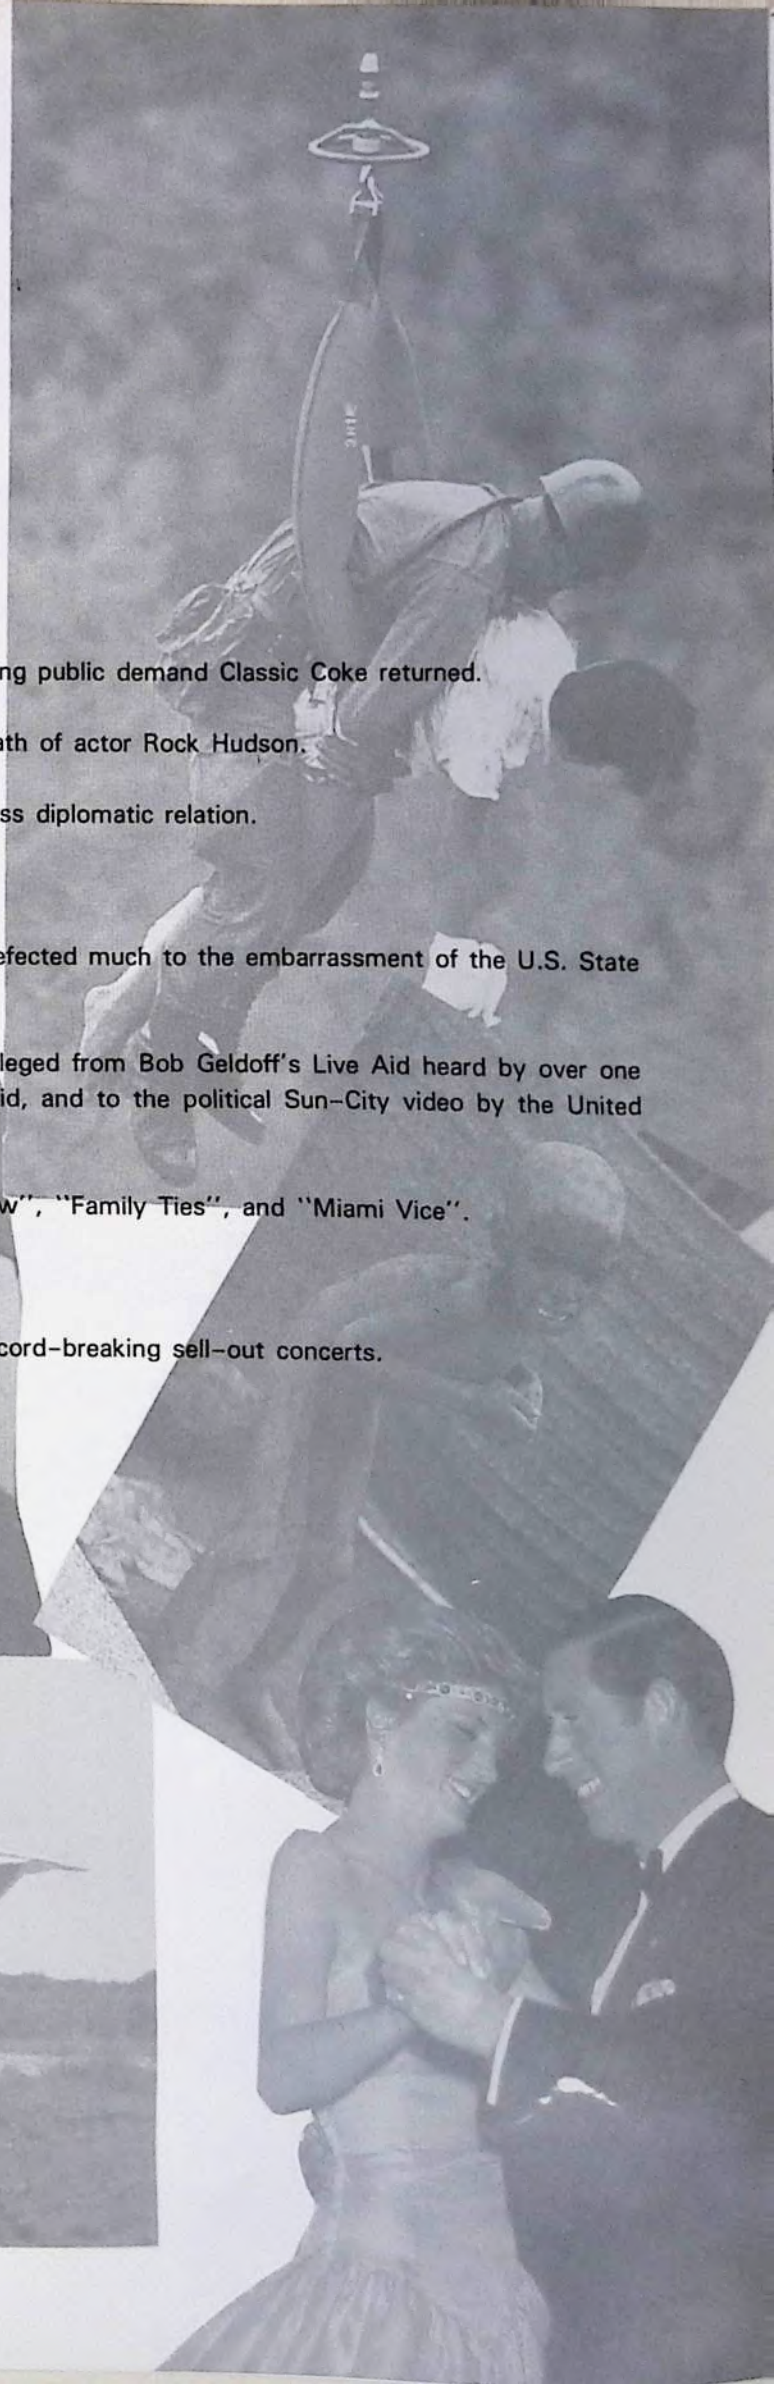

Soviet cosmonaut Yuri Yurchenko jumped ship in New Orleans and later re-defected much to the embarrassment of the U.S. State Department.

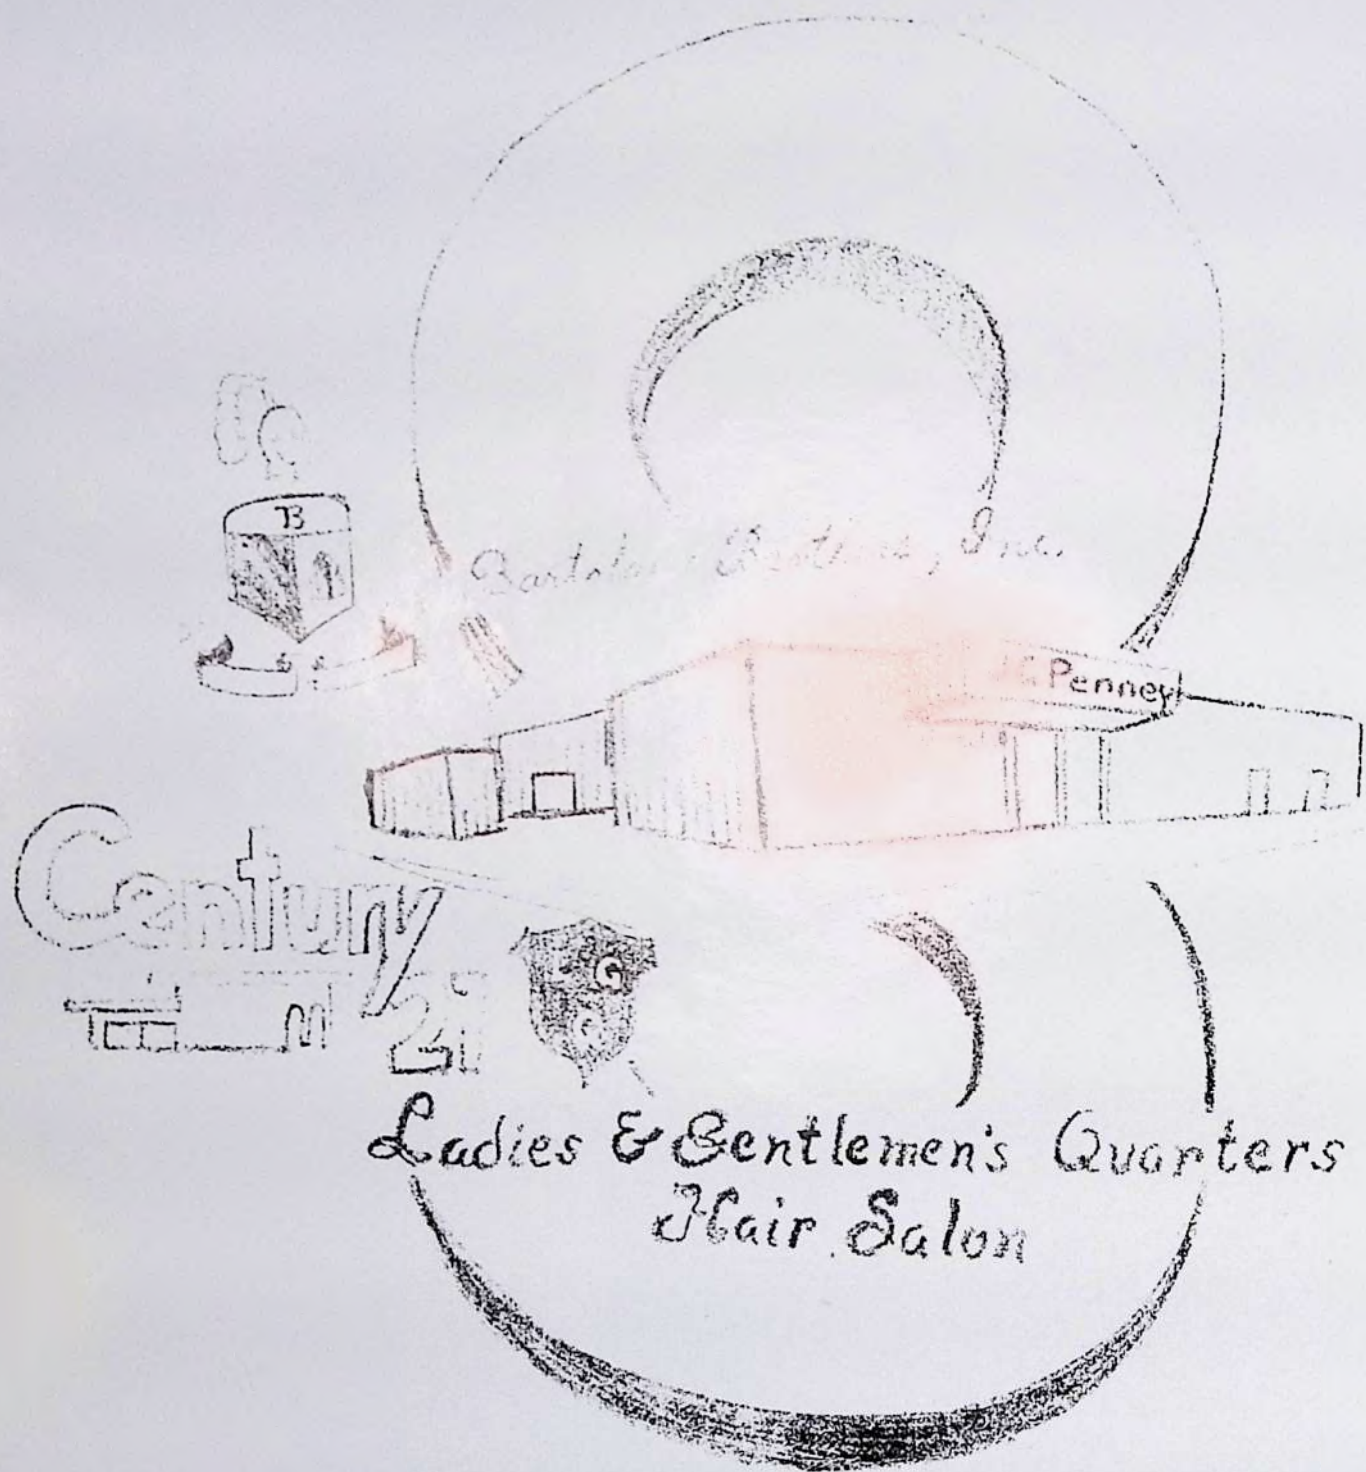

Rock stars lent their musical hands to help the world's underprivileged from Bob Geldoff's Live Aid heard by over one billion people, to Willie Nelson and John Cougar Mellencamp's Farm Aid, and to the political Sun-City video by the United Artists Against Apartheid.

NBC topped the Nielson Ratings with such shows as: "The Cosby Show", "Family Ties", and "Miami Vice".

Halley's Comet reappeared after an absence of 76 years.

Bruce Springsteen and Madonna rocked the United States with their record-breaking sell-out concerts.
